The most important occurrence in relation to the welfare and efficiency tients. This increased the non-con of the Home during the year was the sumptive accommodation by about ter lonation, by Mr. and Mrs. Chas. M. Cooke of an open-air pavilion for the treatment of tuberculosis pulmonalis.

While the pavilion has not been a sufficient length of time in use to demonstrate the value of the open-air number of applicants may increase, so treatment in Honolulu, it has unquesionably shown that form of treatment to be of great value in alleviating the distressing symptoms of the disease for which it has been adopted.

Indeed, the manner in which cough and dyspnoea are relieved would alone be ample reason for the expense incurred in erecting the pavilion; but there is every indication that the pavilion will enable the Home to cure entirely more cases of the discuse than formerly-before this form of treatment was practicable

At the present time the Home is efficiently taking care of all applicants for admission who are entitled to its benefits on account of having some orm of incurable disease.

Its capacity has been increased, naturally, by the erection of the pavilion. Were it not for this increased capac ity cases would have to be refused, as the nontubercular side, just before the pavilion was available, was taxed to its utmost accommodation. But the pavilion enabled us to take one of the Hahing Company.
